“Florida Food, Drink & Women’s Journalism,” Florida’s women’s pages - the only place for women in journalism in the 1950s and 1960s - were considered the best in the country. The women in these sections explained Florida food and drink as the state grew. Using backgrounds in home economics, they explained changing tastes in local and national dishes, dessert trends and restaurant reviews. Featured journalists: Jeanne Voltz, Jane Nickerson and Ruth Gray - pioneering food journalists.

Kimberly Voss (PhD, Maryland) is a full professor of journalism at the University of Central Florida whose research agenda focuses on historical analysis of women journalists’ careers, women’s political influence and the definition of women’s news in the post-World War II years. She has published five books and more than 40 journal articles, including those in American Journalism, Journalism History and Journalism & Mass Communication Quarterly.
